

About

Newsletter

Contact

OAK HILL CEMETERY

EXPLORE VISIT GET INVOLVED

PLAN AHEAD NEWS EVENTS

ABOUT EVENTS EXPLORE VISIT

GET INVOLVED PLAN AHEAD

CONTACT US CART

October 20,
2016

At 2 Georgetown Cemeteries, History in Black and White

WASHINGTON — It is a tale of two cities of the dead. Two historic cemeteries lie side by side in Georgetown, separated by an overgrown dirt road, a rusting chain-link fence and two centuries of racial history.

On one side is Oak Hill, a lush slope of well-tended graves of congressmen, publishers and cabinet members who were, with few exceptions, white. On the other side is the Mount Zion and Female Union Band Society Cemetery. There, broken gravestones lie in large piles and dogs and their owners have taken the place of mourners for the slaves, freedmen and mostly black citizens buried below.

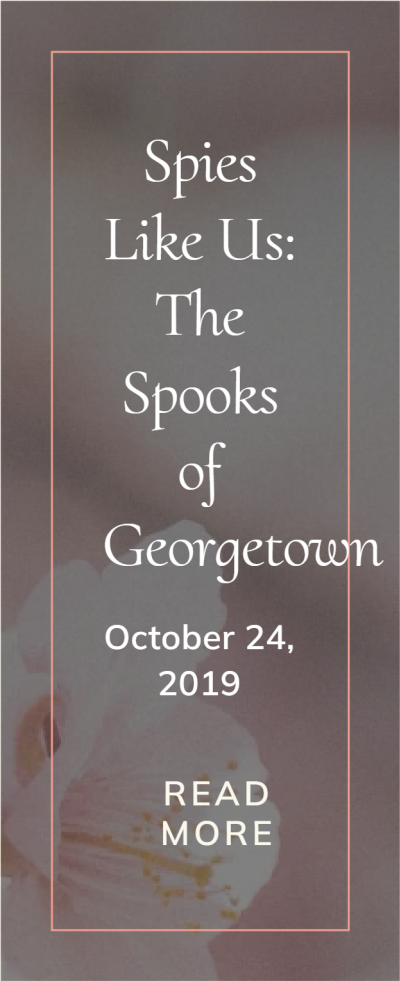

“There’s a quote: ‘Death reflects life, it’s not separate and apart,’” said Vincent deForest, a civil rights activist turned preservationist who has fought since the early 1970s to rescue Mount Zion. On a recent morning, to underscore the immortality of inequality, he stood in the black cemetery and pointed to the white cemetery.

Read more at the New York Times ▶

< Previous

Next >

Related News

Spies Like Us: The Spooks of Georgetown

October 24,
2019

READ
MORE

Lost Capitol Hill: Death and Resurrection

September
30, 2019

READ
MORE

Join our mailing list!

CLICK
HERE TO SUBSCRIBE

The Oak Hill Cemetery

3001 R St NW
Washington, DC
20007

202-337-2835
info@oakhillcemeterydc.org

SUPPORT OAK
HILL CEMETERY

EXPLORE

Burial
Records
History
Notable
Figures
Photo
Gallery
Genealogy

VISIT

Getting
Here
Map
Groups
Floral
Tributes

Plan Ahead

Casket
Sites
Cremation
Sites
Family
Mausoleums
Memorial
Tree
Program